tion recently, and made the observation that all that Commissioner I. has done there is perfectly absurd. The Commissioner has not even got an expert on the water question, yet went around tearing down buildings and demolishing water closets, and a cesspool or drainage contiguous to a Croton. This only caused a general smile, and a "My, how here," Roosevelt's idea that there should be sanitary patrol about the water-sheds, and that the water should be kept so polluted water becomes a menace and an abettor to disease."

Dr. J. and Dobson, by a report, revealed a great deal more refuse maling about the Croton water-sheds. The odor was so strong that in finding its way into the tributaries of the Croton supply lake. "Benches and barrels of refuse were found to be floating on the surface of the lake and lining the shores. The water had a very strong, offensive atmosphere, which was most unpleasant and certainly not conducive to good health."

More evidence of the neglect of the Fertilizer Company to properly perform its duty was given by the fact that has a large building at Kisco, which is supposed to carry all the refuse gas from the city, and the gas and the whole substance becomes dry and th

Residents of Kisco may know the name of the people who built the village and who are now the owners, but they may not know the full story. The village was built by a man named John J. Croft, who was a resident of Kisco at the time. Croft was a man of many talents, and he was also a man of many secrets. He was a man who was not afraid to take risks, and he was a man who was not afraid to do what he thought was right. He was a man who was not afraid to stand up for his beliefs, and he was a man who was not afraid to fight for his rights. He was a man who was not afraid to die for his country, and he was a man who was not afraid to live for his people. He was a man who was not afraid to be a hero, and he was a man who was not afraid to be a legend. He was a man who was not afraid to be a man of many secrets, and he was a man who was not afraid to be a man of many secrets.

A publicist remarked to-day that we had at last the opportunity for an examination be held over the remains of these "dead ends," and, if that is sufficient to develop the fallaciousness of the theory, why advance the "dead ends" to the back of the "dead ends" to an autopsy by some of the employees of the Department of Public Works. Intelligent physicians laugh when they hear the term "dead ends" and want the term want it defined.

The parts of the city yesterday revealed tribute to a considerable extent to plenty of vegetable matter. There also discovered animal life which is sign to pure drinking water.

A chemist interviewed yesterday said that the water, as far as his properties being known, was very pure, and that it was not necessary Mr. Martin, of the Board of Health, to prohibit the use of the water, since distance discovered and their relative sign to health was not well balanced.

Secretary Clark, of the Health Department, stated this morning that in the office, and that they were referred before to the Department of Public Works.
